

During the COVID-19 epidemic, Microcatheter Components is continuing to support our customers who are developing life-saving interventions to ease human suffering.

Through stringent sanitary protocols, volunteerism, and recycling efforts, we're intently upholding our mission to protect the natural world and our interdependent global community.

Partnering in the race to develop breakthrough medical devices, we witness the truth that time is precious because life is fragile.

Every medical breakthrough has the potential to rewrite the life story of a loved one, if it can only be rewritten in time.... Each new carefully engineered device can replace grief with joy; it can replace pain with restored health and vitality.

The beauty of our human vulnerability is empathy, and in so many ways we can use the strength of vulnerability to help each other know goodness in this life.

May each of you, our customers, stakeholders, employees, and global neighbors, stay safe and well--

The Microcatheter Components Team